

ABSTRACT

A digital video device includes a processor and a digital random-access memory communicating with the processor. The memory includes an edit tag library storing a plurality of edit tags and video storage storing a digital video data. The digital video data includes one or more video segments and one or more embedded edit tags. The one or more embedded edit tags are selected from the edit tag library and specify edit operations to be performed on the digital video data.